ABSTRACT

The following information is contained in this directory: Section 1 lists various national organizations with adult education concerns. For each listing, the presiding officer, address, telephone number, and a brief description of the organization's purpose and services are given. Section 2 lists adult education periodicals and includes several international and specialized publications. The title, editor's name, frequency of publication, statement of purpose or scope, source of availability, subscription rates, and price are given for each listing. Section 3 briefly describes the type and scope of abstracting and information systems. The Educational Resource Information Center (ERIC) receives primary attention because of its direct relevance to adult education. Section 4 lists names, addresses, and services of information search services. Special purpose agencies to serve adult educators and others are listed in Section 5. Section 6 contains a listing (by state) of schools offering graduate programs in adult education. Section 7 reports central bibliographic sources in adult education which would give adult educators valuable leads to the literature in their field. (WL)

INTRODUCTION

The 1974 Directory of Resources in Adult Education was Stanley Grabowski's legacy to adult education, when the ERIC Clearinghouse in Adult Education was united with the one in Vocational-Technical Education to produce the ERIC Clearinghouse in Career Education. The latter is honored to join with the Adult Education Association, U.S.A., in updating and circulating this fine resource.

In the 1976 Directory of Resource in Adult Education, Professor John A. Niemi and his colleague, Daniel C. Jessen, build upon Grabowski's 1974 proposition that adult education embraces the following core areas:

1. "The intellectual, psychological, social and physical characteristics of adults which affect their learning processes;
2. The career and personal interests and motives which influence the educational needs of adults;
3. The methods of instruction, independent study, program planning, and evaluation which are effective in the education and training of adults;
4. The system of institutional arrangements for providing adult education and training, as well as the economic, social, philosophical factors which govern the operation and growth of this system."
(Grabowski and Glenn, 1974, p. iv)

Grabowski, Stanley M.; and Glenn, Ann C. 1974 Directory of Resources in Adult Education. DeKalb, Ill.; ERIC Clearinghouse in Career Education, Northern Illinois University, 1974. (ED 097 413)

The field of adult education supports many journals which keep adult educators up to date on happenings in areas of direct concern to them. These journals are listed in Section II, as they were in the prior Directory. However, this new Directory includes several international and specialized publications which were not reported before.

The Educational Resource Information Center (ERIC) secures, puts under document control, announces, and often makes available in microfiche form the local, state, and Federal literature in adult education. This resource is described in Section III, along with several other information systems which adult educators must keep in mind in order to remain abreast of rapid changes occurring in the field.

The ERIC information system yields its documents most expeditiously with multiple coordinate index searching. While such searching can be done manually, a thorough manual search ordinarily proves very time consuming because multiple coordinate index searching requires collation which costs a lot of time as the number of index terms required to isolate the desired area increases beyond two or three terms. A number of computer search systems fulfill this need expeditiously when queried early enough to tolerate their needed processing delays. Section IV lists the names, addresses and services of these rapidly expanding services. Since these services are proliferating rapidly, users should refer to the ERIC Clearinghouse in Career Education, 204 Gabel, Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, Illinois 60115 for more current lists when necessary to find a service closer at hand, or perhaps faster or less expensive, than any listed.

Many agencies exist to serve adult educators. Such special purpose agencies for adult educators and others are listed in Section V.

With adults now constituting over half the persons being educated, the number of graduate programs to educate adult educators are increasing as well. All known graduate education programs for adult educators are listed by state in Section VI. This section also includes the names and addresses of the Commission of Professors of Adult Education, the group of the Adult Education Association, U.S.A. primarily engaged in the training of adult educators.

Finally, Section VII reports central bibliographic sources in adult education. These resources give adult educators valuable leads to the literature of their field.

The improvements of the 1976 Directory are due in no small part to several suggestions which users of its predecessor were good enough to share upon its publication. The authors invite continuation of this practice. It is only in sharing our own desires and solutions that we can together continually improve services to the field of adult education.

SECTION III

INFORMATION SYSTEMS

The flood of data about all areas of knowledge today threatens to overwhelm even the most ardent student. The field of adult education is no exception. The time-honored methods of consulting the resources of libraries, professional organizations and other institutions are still indispensable, but not totally adequate. Hence, other types of "information retrieval" systems have sprung up to make information more readily available to the seeker of knowledge. More specifically, their function is to evaluate, abstract and index documents relating to given topics within a number of areas.

In this section, such resources are enumerated. The ERIC (Educational Resources Information Center) system receives primary attention here because of its direct relevance to adult education. Other information systems are also listed.

ERIC

The System In response to the needs of educational practitioners and researchers for information on fundamental research, developmental, pilot and demonstration projects, the Educational Resources Information Center was established in 1966 by the U. S. Office of Education. ERIC, presently a part of the National Institute of Education, is a nationwide system which acquires and stores educational information and then makes this information readily available to all educators. The network currently consists of a central processing facility in Washington, D.C., and sixteen Clearinghouses, each of which focuses on a single area within the broad field of education. (For a listing of Clearing-houses and their scope, see Section V.) It is the responsibility of each Clearinghouse to select the most important documents relating to its specialty and to catalog, index and prepare abstracts of these documents. Included in ERIC's data base are journal articles, significant project reports, research reports, curriculum guides, bibliographies, survey results, speeches, conference proceedings, etc. The data base of over 200,000 entries continues to grow weekly.

Publications The key to the ERIC system is the Thesaurus of ERIC Descriptors, a vocabulary of terms which are used to index the documents to make it easy for researchers and others to retrieve them. The documents themselves are available either in paper copy or on microfiche, a process that reproduces them in miniature form on small sheets of film. Journal articles (also indexed in the ERIC system) are available in perodicals' libraries. The locations of collections of ERIC microfiche are listed in Section IV.

ERIC publishes monthly Resources in Education and Current Index to Journals in Education. R.I.E. (formerly Research in Education) is an abstract journal announcing recently completed research reports, descriptions of programs and other documents of educational significance, most of which are otherwise unpublished. C.I.J.E. is a monthly guide to the periodical literature, covering more than 500 major educational and education-related publications. A semiannual and an annual cumulative index are available for both publications.

ERIC Clearinghouse in Career Education The ERIC Clearinghouse in Career Education (ERIC/CICE), located at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, Illinois, is of special interest to adult educators. It resulted from the merger of the ERIC Clearinghouse on Adult Education, formerly at Syracuse University, and the ERIC Clearinghouse on Vocational and Technical Education, formerly at Ohio State University. The services previously performed by these Clearinghouses are now being performed by ERIC/CICE. Its scope is as follows:

* the formal and informal education of adults, relating to all adult-life roles and stages of the adult life-cycle;
* vocational and technical education, including new sub-professional fields and industrial arts education;
* career education at all levels and by all sponsors, including attention to career counseling and relations between work and life.

ERIC/CICE can be contacted at 204 Gabel Hall, Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, Illinois 60115 (telephone: (815) 753-1251 or 1252). Dr. David V. Tiedeman is the Director; Dr. John A. Niemi and Dr. Richard Erickson are Associate Directors.

Adult Education Descriptors When documents and periodicals are abstracted by ERIC/CICE, up to 20 descriptive labels are tagged to each entry to enable adult education researchers to extract relevant information when they need it. A partial list of the kinds of descriptors commonly used for adult education documents is included here to suggest avenues of approach in researching particular adult and continuing education topics.

SECTION IV

INFORMATION SEARCH SERVICES

Various agencies serve as centers at and from which information searches may be conducted. In some cases, a "manual search" of books, documents, etc. may uncover the desired information. ERIC microfiche, for example, are available at many locations for the use of adult educators. A listing of these locations is found below.

Sometimes the need for a more exhaustive search may lead to searching a data bank by means of a computer. Such a search may include other data bases, as well as ERIC. A listing of some such facilities is also included in this section.

LOCATION OF ERIC MICROFICHE COLLECTIONS

The following list of ERIC microfiche collections is based on the current "standing order" customer list of the ERIC Document Reproduction Service. The customers listed receive on a regular and continuous basis the entire ERIC microfiche output each year (about 12,000 titles on 20,000 microfiche). Also listed are organizations known to possess extensive ERIC microfiche collections. Not all of the organizations listed are open to the public, nor do they all necessarily include complete collections of earlier documents. Advance inquiry is advisable in advance of a personal visit. Most of these locations have RIE and CIJE available to assist in developing manual searches.

Organizations are listed as follows: in the United State, alphabetically by states and within states; in Canada, alphabetically; other foreign, alphabetically within countries or territories.

Information search services having computer facilities are available through the sixteen ERIC Clearinghouses in their respective scope areas. The Clearinghouses are listed in Section V. Other sources which use the ERIC data base for conducting searches will be reported in the latter part of 1976 in a document to be entitled "Survey of ERIC Data Base Search Services." This document may be obtained from ERIC Processing and Reference Facility, 4833 Rugby Avenue, Suite 303, Bethesda, Maryland 20014, or from any of the sixteen Clearinghouses. In the meantime, the following list of information search services which have the ERIC data base (RIE and CIJE) may be useful.

Two organizations have developed searches of their own systems. The NTI Search is an abstract retrieval service of abstracts of technical reports produced from government-funded research and development projects released since 1964. The address is:

National Technical Information Service
U. S. Department of Commerce
5285 Port Royal Road
Springfield, VA 22151

DATRIX is a computer search service of all the doctoral dissertations listed in Dissertation Abstracts for any designated area of interest or study. The service produces a bibliography containing the complete title of the dissertation, the author's name, the university at which the dissertation was accepted, date of publication, and the page and volume of Dissertation Abstracts where the dissertation is listed. Prices of microfiche or hard copies of the dissertation are included.

Almost all of the search services cited charge a fee ranging from $5.00 to $25.00.

SECTION V

OTHER RESOURCES

Individuals and agencies who may be of assistance to the adult education practitioner or researcher are numerous. Often local people, such as a librarian, a training director of a large business or industry, or a director of an adult education center, can help in locating useful and relevant resources. In addition to local contacts and the resources listed in Sections I-IV, the adult educator may consult special libraries, and information centers, state offices of adult education and adult education professors whose names appear in Section VI.

The following listings specify some of these kinds of sources. Because programs and personnel sometimes change, a telephone call to check current resources at any given site, office or institution is advised as a first point of contact.

GRADUATE PROGRAMS IN ADULT EDUCATION

A program in graduate studies in adult education (or related areas) is being offered by an increasing number of institutions. The following listing attempts to show the availability of graduate study programs in various states and provinces. The person listed should be contacted for specific information.

This listing was based in part on input from the Commission of Professors of Adult Education (part of the Adult Education Association, U.S.A.) and on signed statements by representatives from other institutions.

Programs are listed by state or province and institution. To the extent known, the degrees offered and persons in charge of the program are also indicated. An up-to-date list of the members of the Commission of Professors of Adult Education follows the listing of the programs.

RESOURCE DOCUMENTS RE: GRADUATE PROGRAMS

For further information on graduate programs in adult education, the following documents should be of particular interest.

Adult Education Association of the U.S.A. Adult Education Dissertation Abstracts, 3 volumes. Volume I, dissertations from 1935-62 (ED 069 967); Volume II, dissertations from 1963-67 (ED 044 537); Volume III, dissertations from 1968-69 (ED 052 450). Each bibliography contains citations, abstracts, and ordering information. Studies are classified by broad subject headings.

Aker, George F. Criteria for Evaluating Graduate Study in Adult Education: Findings of a Study Conducted for the Commission of Professors of Adult Education. Chicago University, IL, Center for Continuing Education. ED 110 753. The report identifies and organizes criteria for evaluating and determining the effectiveness of graduate programs in adult education. The first phase of the study, a review of the appropriate literature, contributed to the formulation of 22 criterion statements relevant to the development of graduate study in adult education. The study's second phase involved: defining the field of adult education; developing a behavioral classification scheme for the educational objectives of graduate programs in adult education; identifying existing statements of education objectives, professional competencies, and specific on-the-job behaviors of adult educators; classifying, refining, and formulating these statements into behavioral descriptions of these objectives; and refining those behavioral descriptions into a series of 23 statements for evaluating graduate study in adult education. Phase three involved surveying the opinions of adult education graduate students and doctorates regarding the importance of graduate study in developing professional competencies in the 23 behaviors. The phase three findings indicate that all 23 behaviors are important in the practice of adult education and that nearly all adult educators have a need for increasing their competence in these behaviors. Suggestions for improving graduate programs in adult education conclude the study, with an 11-page bibliography following.

Griffith, William S. and Gilles H. Cloutier. College and University Degree Programs for the Preparation of Professional Adult Educators, 70-71. Washington D.C. U.S. Government Printing Office, 1974. ED 094 138. This directory of institutions providing a degree program for training adult educators was developed to assist students and their advisors learn of training opportunities. This publication is essentially the same as ED 058 540 (see next entry).

_____. A Directory and Analysis of Degree Programs for Preparing Professional Adult Educators in the United States. Chicago: University of Chicago Department of Education, 1972. ED 058 540. This study examines the current and planned status of opportunities of training for adult educators in the United States through programs especially designed to meet their needs, as indicated by the degree programs and curricula offered and projected by higher educational institutions. Contents include: a review of the literature, a description of data-gathering procedures, summary of findings and the authors' conclusions and interpretations of the data. A bibliography is provided.

Ingham, Roy J., B. G. Munro and Romeo M. Massey. A Survey of Graduate Programs in Adult Education in the United States and Canada. Tallahassee: Florida State University Department of Adult Education, 1970. ED 044 571. This survey was designed to provide information about some aspects of graduate study in adult education. It updates a previous edition, listing the major changes occurring since the 1968 survey.

Knox, Alan B. Development of Adult Education Graduate Programs. Adult Education Association of the U.S.A., Washington, D.C. ED 110 835 Prepared at the request of the executive committee of the Commission of the Professors of Adult Education, the monograph explores problems and solutions that American and Canadian professors of adult education report in initiating and revising graduate programs. Survey questionnaires (approximately two-thirds return rate) were sent to one professor at each institutional graduate program included on the 1972-73 membership listing in the Commission of the Professors of Adult Education. The questionnaire consisted of three parts: program characteristics, four items on each of 22 issues related to program initiation/revision, and comments on starting a new program. An age-of-program categorization was used throughout the data analysis to identify developmental trends. Twenty to 70% of the programs reported problems related to 10 widespread issues: the number of professors in the program, their mix of competencies, their departmental location, the specialized adult education courses, the process for approval and modification of courses, ways to relate out-of-department courses to adult education, combined department arrangements, the attraction of able graduate students, the function of faculty research, and the chairman's role in obtaining support for the adult education graduate program. Each of these issues is described in one of the monograph's 10 sub-sections.

Long, Huey B. and Roger Heimstra. Graduate Research in Adult Education. Washington, D.C.: Adult Education Association of the U.S.A., 1974. (Not in ERIC) This book discusses the development of perspective, survey research, historical research, experimental research and field research and grounded theory. Also discussed are the central issues on the methodology of scientific research as applied to adult education, trends in adult education graduate research, the need for a new approach to graduate research and the practice of graduate research.

Verner, Coolie, et al. The Preparation of Adult Educators: A Selected Review of the Literature Produced in North America. Adult Education Association of the USA, Washington, D.C.: Syracuse University, NY. ERIC Clearinghouse on Adult Education, 1970. ED 041 180. This literature review on the preparation of professional adult educators attempts to cover the leading areas of discussion and research as well as some of the more interesting conclusions reported. Six major preoccupations of research are outlined, followed by two chapters on adult education as a discipline and a profession, patterns of adult educational leadership, levels and categories of adult educators, and their learning needs. Chapter 4 covers the growth of graduate education in adult education, numbers of doctorates granted during the period 1935-69, theoretical models for the doctorate, learning objectives, program content, procedures and criteria for evaluating graduate study, and provisions for field work and inservice training. Conclusions touch on such aspects as the status (firmly established) of adult education as an academic field, the nature of professional education (essentially graduate and postvocational), and the need for research on roles and functions, evaluation of training program outcomes, and the development of suitable measurement instruments. The document includes a 118-item bibliography, instructions for ordering from ERIC, and a list of ERIC/AE publications.

SECTION VII

ADULT EDUCATION DOCUMENTS

Listing the thousands of adult education related books, documents and articles lies outside the scope of this Directory. When seeking printed resources in adult education, a search of ERIC files (manually or by computer) will yield relevant resources. In addition, Russell Kleis' Bibliography on Continuing Education should prove to be helpful for most purposes.

This section includes information on the following:

* several adult education "classics";
* publications prepared by the ERIC Clearinghouse in Career Education (as well as by its predecessor, the Clearinghouse on Adult Education);
* how to order ERIC document reproductions.

ADULT EDUCATION CLASSICS

The selection of publications for inclusion here is purely arbitrary, but it represents some of the key publications in adult education.

Bergevin, Paul, Dwight Morris and Robert M. Smith. Adult Education Procedures. New York: The Seabury Press, 1963.

This book is designed as a handbook for those persons who select and use procedures for adult education in a variety of settings. The procedures described have been developed and tested in many different settings. Suggestions for planning adult education activities follow a six-step procedure. Ideas for designing clinics, institutes and workshops are also included. For each of the twenty techniques and sub-techniques presented, information is presented on time of use, personnel, communication-pattern, advantages and limitations, responsibilities, physical arrangements and evaluation.

Bischof, Ledford J. Adult Psychology (2nd ed.) New York: Harper and Row, 1976.

This second edition represents many changes from the earlier volume which mainly summarized research done on adults. It reflects a more organized approach to the study of adults and includes viewpoints previously omitted, e.g., women's roles. Adults are changing as the world changes, so the author suggests that older studies of adults may have less validity than recent ones. Contents include: the adult body, adult performance, adult personality, the social adult, vocations and avocations, marital status and the family, the aged adult. An extensive bibligraphy of research findings concludes the volume.

Brunner, Edmund deS., et. al. An Overview of Adult Education Research. Washington, DC: Adult Education Association, 1959.

More than 4,000 titles were scrutinized (600 of which are cited) in preparing this report of research in liberal, nonvocational adult education at an early stage in the development of a new discipline within the total universe of education, wide differences were noted in the amount and quality of research in the various disciplines of the field and in the applicability to them of research and theory derived from the social science disciplines. The following aspects of adult education were examined--adult learning, motivation to learn, attitudes, adult interests, participants, organization and administration, programs and program planning, methods and techniques, use of discussion, lay and professional leaders and leadership, group research, the community and its institutions, and problems of evaluation research. (Available from Adult Education Association of the U.S.A., 1225 19th Street, N.W., Washington, DC 20036.)

Clark, Burton R. The Marginality of Adult Education. Chicago: Center for the Study of Liberal Education for Adults, 1958. 23 pp., ED 047 284.

This essay explores the reasons behind the marginal situation which often plagues adult education enterprises. The author suggests that dependent position in the organizational structure, lack of clear goals, and operating pressures force many adult education programs into a service mentality, i.e., dealing with people as consumers rather than as students. He fears that this leads to patterns of programming which challenge the identity and integrity of the organization. As an antidote, Clark calls for the creation of a quality image and task differentiation. A postscript by Harry L. Miller focuses on the implications of this proposal on the university level.

Freire, Paulo. (Translated by Myra Ramos.) Pedagogy of the Oppressed. New York: The Seabury Press, 1970.

Freire, a Brazilian adult educator, presents adult education as a tool of liberation for poor and oppressed peoples. He shows how education is often used as a tool of enslavement by people in power, e.g., in the "banking" concept of education in which the teacher dispenses knowledge to the learners. Freire proposes the use of dialogics as a way of helping the poor to practice freedom. He suggests that learners be helped to develop a critical consciousness through the process of conscientization. His goal was political freedom through basic literacy training. This book presents the "why" and "how" of this process.

Gagne, Robert M. The Conditions of Learning. New York: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc., 1970.

Learning is a complex phenomenon which cannot be simply explained, according to Gagne. As an alternative, he defines eight distinct types of learning, each with its own set of required conditions. These he arranges in hierarchical order, moving from stimulus-response connections on up to problem solving. Eight ways in which a teacher can manage instructional conditions are proposed.

Gideon, Victor C., et. al. Terminology About Adult Continuing Education: A Preliminary Structure and a Suggested Development Process. Washington, DC: National Center for Educational Statistics (DHEW/OE) 1971. 180 pp., ED 065 761.

This feasibility study of terminology, the first step in attempting to resolve some of the communication problems in adult/continuing education, describes the process used and reflects the current conditions in this area. In researching terminology use, attention was directed to current concepts; the extent of agreement concerning terms and definitions currently in use; the effectiveness of various cooperative processes, with emphasis on the Delphi process; and related factors. Part I focuses on background information and an overview of the project. Part II describes the participants, the context, and the objectives, along with a detailed history of the developmental process and of the various encounters and inter-relationships that occurred. Part III presents a conceptual model of adult/continuing education. In the conceptual model, the educational process is presented as a dynamic system consisting of four basic processes--appraisal, facilitation, participation, and learning. Four basic recommendations are offered to facilitate the continuing work on the development of a terminology handbook. They are: expand the interaction between the Office of Education and professional practitioners; proceed with the project; use the Delphi process; and consider future work within the context of the development of an integrated data system for the whole education field.

Grattan, C. Hartley. In Quest of Knowledge. New York: Association Press, 1955.

This book presents an historical perspective on American adult education, tracing it back to its roots in ancient Greece and Rome, medieval times, and efforts in Great Britain since the Industrial Revolution. More detail is given to the development of adult education from colonial America through the 1950's. Though a lengthy volume, the author makes no claims to exhaustiveness, but rather seeks to present a survey appropriate to novices in the field.

Houle, Cyril O. The Design of Education. San Francisco: Jossey-Bass Inc., Publishers, 1972.

This book is a blueprint for planning, setting up, implementing and evaluating adult education programs. It suggests a practical and flexible system which can be applied to adult education activities of any kind. This system involves classifying adult learning situations into categories, then following a step-by-step action plan. It should be valuable both for setting up and evaluating program designs and implementation. A lengthy bibliographic essay assists adult educators in further study on related topics.

Jensen, Gale, et. al., ed. Adult Education: Outlines of an Emerging Field of University Study. Washington, DC: Adult Education Association, 1964.

This book is concerned with the development of a more complete description of the field and body of knowledge of adult and continuing education required for graduate training programs for adult educators. The sixteen chapters, written by university professors of adult education, are in four sections-- (1) a delineation and description of the milieu in which a graduate program for the training of adult educators is emerging, (2) adult education and other disciplines, (3) theories about determining objectives for adult education activities, programs and management of the learning situation, and (4) implications for programs of graduate study in adult education. The Commission of the Professors of Adult Education is explained in an appendix.

Johnstone, John W. and Ramon J. Rivera. Volunteers for Learning, A Study of the Educational Pursuits of American Adults. Chicago: National Opinion Research Center, 1965.

Contemporary adult education in the United States today is examined by means of a national sample survey. In this monograph, adult learning is approached from a social-psychological vantage point--the needs, motives, and satisfactions which impel adults to seek to learn some subject. The organization of adult education is considered only insofar as such organization facilitates or hinders individuals in the pursuit of learning. The extent and nature of adult participation in continuing education are reviewed, the people who engage in these pursuits are identified, the situations, circumstances, and personal goals which influence people to become involved in educational endeavors are reconstructed, the national climate of opinion regarding education for adults is looked at, and to a lesser degree, the range of facilities available for the instruction of the adult population is investigated. (Available from Aldine Publishing Co., Chicago, IL)

Kidd, J. R. How Adults Learn. New York: Association Press, 1973.

The book's emphasis is on learning during the years of adulthood and examines present-day practice of adult education for practitioners. This revised edition brings up to date advances in such areas of learning as controversial theory; the effects of environment; sensory processes; intellectual capacities; motivation and attitude; transactional analysis; conditioning (behaviorism); training programs; group development; emotional climate; curriculum; the teacher as learner; and responsibility of the teacher. Although not designed as a textbook, it has been used as a textbook around the world in many translations.

Kleis, Russell J. Bibliography on Continuing Education. East Lansing: Office of Studies in Continuing Education, Michigan State University, 1972. 113 pp, ED 078 242.

This is the fifth in a series of updatings of this bibliography. Nearly three-fourths of the titles have appeared since the original list was prepared seven years ago. The bibliography is organized in 12 sections. Eight of the sections consist principally of books, each of which relates to a course, seminar, or institute of the program of Graduate Studies in Continuing Education at Michigan State University. One section includes research and bibliographical listings; another lists series publications of special interest to students of continuing education; and the final section includes periodicals and special publications. The titles of the 12 sections are: General Overview of Continuing Education; Adult Learning and Methods in Continuing Education; Social Foundations and Social Significance; Continuing Education in Colleges and Universities; Continuing Education in Local Communities; Adult Basic Education; Continuing Education for Special Groups; Comparative Studies in Continuing Education; Physical Environment for Learning; Bibliographies, Literature Reviews and Research in Continuing Education; Special Series Publications; and Periodicals.

Knowles, Malcolm S. (ed.) Handbook of Adult Education in the Unit d States. Chicago: Adult Education Association of the U.S.A., 1960.

This was the fourth in a series of reference-type works published by AEA-USA. It is an effort to take stock of the major developments in the field and bring adult educators up to date on these developments. This 1960 volume has historical value for those wanting to sense where the field of adult education was just prior to the great social changes of the 1960's. Major sections of the volume are: overview, concerns of adult educators, institutional programs and resources, program areas, projections for the future and a directory of organizations.

Knowles, Malcolm S. The Modern Practice of Adult Education. Association Press, 1970.

This book is a guided inquiry into the newly emerging technology of adult education based on an original theory of andragogy (the art and science of helping adults learn) as distinguished from pedagogy (teaching children and youth). Its central thesis is that adults in certain crucial respects are different from young people as learners, and that a different approach is needed. Part 1 explores what the differences are, and what they mean to the development of a unique adult education methodology. In Part 2, principles and practical techniques are offered for establishing an organizational climate and structure, assessing needs and interests, defining purposes and objectives, translating objectives into program designs, organizing and administering total programs, evaluating them, and using a systems approach to program planning and operation. The third part presents tested management procedures for courses, workshops, institutes, and other types of educational activities. Numerous samples of actual programs and successfully used materials are introduced to illustrate a variety of curricular offerings, interest groups, and learning levels. An index, chapter bibliographies, and 77 tables and figures are also included. (Available from The Association Press, 291 Broadway, New York, NY 10007.)

Leypoldt, Martha M. 40 Ways to Teach in Groups. Valley Forge, PA: The Judson Press, 1967.

This book is designed to be a practical guidebook for persons with leadership responsibilities with groups of adults. Forty distinct teaching methods based on principles of group dynamics are identified and described in brief. The functions of the group leader and the group members are clearly explained, along with those of other persons having special responsibilities. An introduction highlights some of the principles of group leadership.

Lindeman, Eduard C. The Meaning of Adult Education. Montreal: Harvest House, 1961 (first published by New Republic, Inc., New York, 1926).

This collection of short essays sets forth a philosophy for adult education by one of its finest proponents and pioneers, Eduard C. Lindeman. Each is addressed to a particular kind of person, e.g.,"for those who need to be learners, for those who would create, for those who require freedom." Lindeman presents adult education as the means by which mankind (and society) can be lifted above day-to-day concerns into educational pursuits designed to enrich total lives. He critiques conventional education and declares it to be lacking for the adult learner. Some implications for method of adult education are included.

Miller, Harry L. Teaching and Learning in Adult Education. New York: The MacMillan Company, 1964.

This book presents six major instructional formats: small groups in the classroom; small groups in residence; small informal discussion groups; the autonomous adult learner; the large group; mass media. Each is a self-contained unit to enhance the value of this book as a reference tool. The author sets the stage of these formats by focusing on the learning needs of adults. A chapter on evaluation applies broadly to all of the formats presented.

Smith, Robert M., et. al., ed. Handbook of Adult Education. Washington, DC: Adult Education Association, 1970. ED 049 399.

The 1970 edition of this handbook is an attempt to reflect the totality of adult education--its background, function, objectives, and roles--as a discipline and in American society. It is divided into three parts. Part I discusses forms, functions, and the future of adult education--social setting and international dimension for adult education, program development and evaluation, information resources and services, technology, research and theory, philosophical consideration and adult educators. Part II contains papers on institutional forms and arrangements in adult education--colleges and universities, public schools, libraries and museums, cooperative extension service, armed forces, labor unions, business and industry, health and welfare agencies, religious institutions. The third part outlines program areas--curriculum and content, adult basic education, education for the family, social and public responsibilities, vocational and technical education, continuing and self-fulfillment education.

Tough, Allen. The Adult's Learning Projects. Toronto: Ontario Institute of Studies in Education, 1971.

The why, how, and where of all of the adult's learning projects are encompassed in this book. The central focus is on the adult's efforts to learn, in particular, his decisions, preparations, reasons for learning, help, problems, and needs. The 15 chapters of the book discuss the following: highly deliberate efforts to learn; episodes and learning projects; whether learning projects are common and important; what people learn; why people learn; preparatory steps in deciding to proceed with a learning project; choosing the planner; how common and important each type of planner may be; self-planned learning; improving self-planned learning; when a nonhuman resource serves as planner; learning projects planned by a person in a one-to-one relationship; a group or its leader as planner; practical implications for institutions and instructors; and what needs to be done. The three appendixes present some borderline cases in defining learning projects; influential factors; freedom, autonomy, and control; and the relationship between helper and learner. The book contains 119 references. (Available from The Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, 252 Bloor Street West, Toronto, Ontario, Canada M5S 1V6.)

Verner, Coolie and Alan Booth. Adult Education. New York: The Center for Applied Research in Education, Inc., 1964.

The authors give a broad coverage of adult education, showing how it fits into social and historical trends in America. Characteristics of the adult learner are identified, as well as those of the adult educator. The bulk of the volume deals with designing, managing and evaluating adult education activities. The book concludes with a look to the future, anticipating the improvement of adult education programs.

Verner, Coolie. Pole's History of Adult Schools (a facsimile of the 1816 edition with an introduction and bibliographic notes). Washington, DC: Adult Education Association of the U.S.A., 1967.

This is a reprint of the earliest known book about adult education. Historically, Pole's History marked the beginning of the modern era in education by acknowledging the importance of adult education within society. Pole documented the rise of the Bristol School in the early 1800's in England and helped to spread the idea of adult schools throughout England. Verner interprets the meaning of the adult school movement, and presents biographical material on Dr. Thomas Pole.

Informal Bibliographies

Each ERIC/CICE "informal bibliography" is based upon an exhaustive computer search of the information announced in Resources in Education and Current Index to Journals in Education. Items are selected which appear to have broad applicability or interest to the fields of adult continuing education and adult basic education. The bibliographies are between forty and eighty pages in length and consist of the computer printout of the information found in RIE and CIJE. This information includes author, title, date, number of pages, journal citation (for CIJE), ERIC descriptors, an abstract of up to 200 words, (in RIE) institutional source and sponsoring agency. The price of each bibliography is $2.00; order from ERIC/CICE, 204 Gabel Hall, Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, IL 60115.
